

Results from the 2017 Global Food Safety Training Survey

Key Insights from Inside the Industry

Food Manufacturers are Committed to Food Safety

74%

believe they have a clear vision for improving food safety

83%

believe they provide the food safety training needed to drive correct behaviors

55%

believe they are an industry leader in food safety standards

There is Always Room for Improvement

67%

say they still have employees not following their food safety program on the floor

36%

Only measure employee performance on the floor

34%

do not have a quiz/exam during training to verify comprehension

Top 3 Food Safety Challenges

66%

cite "scheduling time for training" as a major challenge

41%

say "verifying effective training" is a big hurdle

27%

report "organizing refresher training" is challenging

Food Safety Training Best Practices

Use shorter training & incorporate "active learning"

Drive consistent, correct application with on-the-floor observation tools

Leverage software to identify training gaps & simplify recordkeeping

Reinforce classroom training with continuous knowledge boosts

Stronger Food Safety Equals Greater Productivity

79%

say their company would be more productive if employees consistently adhered to food safety programs

A strong food safety culture takes a commitment from leaders, managers, and employees to thrive.

Read the full report for more analysis and insights that drive a productive food safety culture.

Download at: bit.ly/GFSTS-2017